FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

We believe that holidays and creative activities are essential for the overall growth of our students. Holidays give children a well-deserved break from their regular studies, allowing them to relax and return to school with fresh energy and enthusiasm. Engaging in creative activities during this time—whether it's art, music, dance, storytelling, or craft—helps children discover their talents, express their thoughts, and build important skills like problem-solving, teamwork, and confidence. These experiences not only make learning joyful but also support their emotional and social development.

Life is best enjoyed when time periods are evenly divided between labour, sleep, and recreation...all people should spend one-third of their time in recreation, which is rebuilding, voluntary activity, never idleness. - Brigham Young

SPLASH POOL ACTIVITY

To provide relief from the scorching heat and add a splash of fun to the day, a Splash Pool Activity was organized for students of Nursery to Sr. KG. The little ones arrived in their colorful swimming gear, brimming with excitement and joy.

As they splashed around in the cool water, their giggles and laughter filled the air, creating a lively and cheerful atmosphere. It was a delightful sight to see them enjoying themselves to the fullest. After the refreshing activity, the students shared their experiences with friends while sipping on lemonade.

The day was filled with joy, bonding, and unforgettable memories, making it a perfect summer treat for the young learners.

In today's changing world, simply studying from books is no longer enough. Along with regular school learning, students need to build a competitive edge to grow and succeed. This means learning new skills like thinking critically, solving problems, speaking clearly, and adjusting to different situations.

When students participate in competitions such as Olympiads, debates, quizzes, or coding challenges, they learn much more than what is taught in class. These activities help them become more confident, focused, and goal-oriented. They also learn how to handle pressure, manage time, and keep trying even when things are tough.

The world today is full of opportunities and challenges. Students are not just competing in school, but also at national and international levels. That's why it's important to give them a chance to explore, compete, and learn beyond the classroom. This prepares them for the future and helps them become smart, strong, and successful individuals.
